

The series of trainings on Unitary Procedure for Investigation of Cases on Human Rights Violation in the Transnistrian Region came to a close

Promo-LEX in partnership with the National Institute of Justice and General Police Inspectorate conducted a range of thematic trainings for judges, prosecutors, lawyers, investigation officers, criminal prosecution officers and representatives of the Centre for Human Rights from Moldova (CHRM).

Thus, during September – October, 98 people benefited from 5 trainings.

The following topics were addressed: International standards on implementation and promotion of human rights in break-away areas that are beyond the control of constitutional authorities; Assessing the effectiveness of the investigation of criminal cases initiated on severe human rights violations committed in the Transnistrian region; Positive obligations of the State from the perspective of the European Court of Human Rights jurisprudence on cases from the Transnistrian region;

National remedies to protect human rights in the Transnistrian region.

Representatives of Promo-LEX Association, Ministry of Justice, General Prosecutor's Office and General Police Inspectorate were trainers at these trainings.

The events were organized with the financial support of the Open Society Institute from Budapest.
