

Promo-LEX Presents The Results of the Quality Quick Vote Count

The Promo-LEX Association carried out a Quick Count during the 30 November 2014 Parliamentary Elections, on a representative sample of 700 polling stations in country, of the total of 1 987 polling stations (polling stations from abroad were not included).

The selected sample is statistically representative for the entire country and the maximum margin of error is 1.2%.

According to the results of the Quick Count, the votes in the country were divided as follows:

Results/Candidates	%	%+ME95	%-ME95	%+ME99	%-ME99
PDM	16.241%	17.414%	15.067%	17.783%	14.698%
PLDM	20.121%	21.294%	18.947%	21.663%	18.578%
PCR	4.956%	6.130%	3.783%	6.499%	3.414%
PSRM	20.369%	21.543%	19.196%	21.912%	18.827%
PCRM	17.923%	19.096%	16.749%	19.465%	16.380%
PL	9.573%	10.747%	8.400%	11.116%	8.031%
Others	10.937%	12.110%	9.763%	12.479%	9.394%

Based on the results of the Promo-LEX Quick Count, the mandates in Parliament will be distributed in the following manner:

Electoral Candidate	Obtained Directly	Redistributed	Total Mandates Obtained
PDM	16	3	19
PLDM	20	4	24

PSRM	20	4	24
PCRM	18	3	21
PL	10	3	13
	84	17	101

The maximum margin of error 1.2% is applicable to the candidate PCR. The margin is calculated for each candidate individually. The analysis excluded 7 polling stations from the sample that failed to report the results and the 151 protocols that were received by the Promo-LEX operators but failed to pass the CEC-established checks.

The Quick Count is a statistical operation of assessing the quality of the voting, and high-precision prediction of the final results of the poll. The operation reported an overall high-quality of voting procedures and lack of major incidents.
