Periodic Review

The screenshot shows a report from the Council of Europe's Venice Commission. The title is "DOMESTIC AND SEXUAL VIOLENCE IN THE REPUBLIC OF MOLDOVA". The report discusses the implementation of recommendations from a 2016 UPH review. It highlights "EMERGING ISSUES" such as legislative gaps and systemic problems. A table provides a detailed description of a specific issue: "Failure to investigate psychological and economic violence". The table includes a description of the problem, suggested questions for the state, and recommendations for legal and procedural changes.

DOMESTIC AND SEXUAL VIOLENCE IN THE REPUBLIC OF MOLDOVA

In the 2016 UPH review, the Moldovan authorities were given 27 recommendations related to gender-based violence and domestic violence, 21 of which were accepted by the state. The level of implementation of the recommendations, along with undertaken actions, are included in the Annex to the Report.

EMERGING ISSUES
Legislative gaps and systemic problems ensure impunity for perpetrators.

Despite an increasing number of complaints filed to the police, the number of criminal and non-criminal cases regarding an domestic violence remains low. In 2017 the police registered 20,871 complaints regarding domestic violence, with 1703 criminal cases and 2513 criminal cases investigated which would mean that the state responded in only 14.7% of the registered complaints. In 2018, 13,620 complaints were registered in the public register 4, with 962 criminal cases and 1,857 non-criminal cases investigated equivalent to 28% of all registered complaints. The situation was similar in 2019 when 20,776 were reported to, and in 2020 when the state responded to only 28.4% of domestic violence complaints. The Parliament should encourage the legislature to ensure that the penalty system works efficiently, so as to be the situation remains unchanged.

SUGGESTED QUESTIONS
• What measures has the state taken to ensure the investigation of all acts of domestic violence complaints?

Failure to investigate psychological and economic violence

DESCRIPTION	RECOMMENDATION
Victims of gender-based violence face difficulties in proving psychological violence, because the law does not regulate the work of psychologists. And psychological assessment reports are not included in the list of evidence permitted by the national law. Many representatives of law enforcement institutions share the opinion that economic and psychological violence do not cause suffering similar to that caused by physical violence. Even though psychological and economic violence are included in article 203.1 of the Criminal Code, there is no case in which the perpetrator was sentenced easily for economic or psychological violence.	• Adopt a special law regarding the work of psychologists. • Amend the Code of Criminal and Civil Procedure to include psychological assessment reports in the list of evidence and evidentiary procedures. • Amend the legislation to ensure that all forms of gender-based violence are considered and punished in Moldova, regardless of the degree of physical harm caused.

SUGGESTED QUESTIONS
• What measures has the state taken to ensure the investigation of all acts of violence? What measures has the State undertaken to ensure that psychological reports are accepted and victims of gender-based violence have no difficulty in proving psychological violence?
